

The Brothers McLeod are Illustrator-animator Greg and screenwriter Myles. They are known for their animations created for TV, short film, games and the web. They have developed, written and directed series for BBC including Pedro and Frankensheep, Sticks, Bitesize History of Maths and Quiff and Boot. They created and produced the Webby Award winning Art Sparks for Tate Kids. They have also written scripts for a range of other production companies: Jungle Junction, Octonauts, Noddy in Toyland, Gaspard and Lisa, Harry and Toto, Frankenstein's Cat, The Hive as well as for Wii/PlayStation games SpongeBob's Atlantis SquarePantis, iCarly, Tak and the Guardians of Gross. They have directed TV commercial campaigns for Skittles, Stena Line and Guinness amongst others. In early 2009, they were nominated for a BAFTA Film Award in the Short Animation category for their film Codswallop. In late 2009, they were nominated for two BAFTA Children's Awards for their work with the Tate. In 2011, they won a BAFTA for their work with BBC Learning.

Their surname is pronounced MacCloud for those not versed in Norse-Scottish history...
